

PRACTISING DIVERSITY: ENGAGING MUSLIMS IN AUSTRALIAN SCHOOLS

Free resources and one-day professional learning workshop for primary and secondary teachers

Teachers from all sectors are invited to register for the following workshop

◆ Friday 2 September 2011

Education Development Centre (EDC)
Corner of Milner Street and Port Road
Hindmarsh
South Australia 5007

The workshop is from 9.00am to 2.30pm. Morning tea and lunch will be provided.

By participating in the workshop, you will:

- ◆ develop skills to meet the educational needs and expectations of diverse cultural, linguistic and religious groups, with particular reference to Muslims
- ◆ acquire whole-school and cross-school strategies to engage with diverse cultural groups
- ◆ acquire strategies to build interfaith and intercultural understandings in the classroom
- ◆ be able to identify subject-specific and cross-curricular links in the Australian Curriculum where interfaith and intercultural content can be introduced

This workshop will also familiarise you with two teacher resources:

1. Learning from One Another: Bringing Muslim perspectives into Australian schools
2. Building interfaith and intercultural understandings in Australian schools

These resources provide information, practical advice and relevant examples for all teachers in Australian schools. Participants will receive copies of both resources at no cost.

This professional learning opportunity is brought to you by the National Centre of Excellence for Islamic Studies (NCEIS), the University of Melbourne, and the Australian Curriculum Studies Association (ACSA), with funding from the Myer Foundation.

This is a free workshop and places are strictly limited. Register online by visiting <www.acsa.edu.au>. For further information please call ACSA on 02 6260 5660.
